Building Modern HTML Emails

Annie Indreiten

Front End Web Developer | Seeking entry-level front-end position
Richmond

Summary

Front-end Web Developer with a strong passion for building first-class, responsive, and user-friendly websites.
I am also interested in HTML Email Development, enjoying the challenge of finding the right balance between the traditional CSS2 approach and the more modern (CSS3) way of coding responsive emails.

Previous experience in the entertainment industry and as a sole trader but I am now seeking a new career in Front-End Web Development.

My skills are the following:

HTML5
CSS2/CSS3
JavaScript
React.js
Responsive Web Design
Flexbox
CSS Grid
Figma
Adobe Photoshop
CodeSandbox
Visual Studio Code
Git/GitHub

Currently gaining experience with:

Tailwind CSS
Node.js
Next.js
Express
PostgreSQL/SQL
Prisma

Restful API's

After 10 years of running my own business, I decided to change direction and learn Web Development! I have always been curious about coding and I have just completed Skillcrush's Front End Developer Blueprint earlier this year. I am currently in the middle of an online Full Stack Developer Bootcamp. My aim with the Bootcamp is to reinforce everything I have learned so far and get to know some backend technologies. I hope at the end to gain a better understanding of how it all links together.

I have a great affection for responsive design principles like CSS Grid and Flexbox.
I love watching how my web pages grow from a small mobile screen into a full desktop version and they still look great! I find this process very satisfying!

So far this year other than the Full Stack Developer Bootcamp, I learned how to code responsive HTML emails and I enjoyed delving into 'the intriguing but strange' world of HTML email development. I guess you could say that I am a lifelong learner and next up on my agenda is SASS.

I have come a long way since I wrote my first line of code in October 2020 and I now feel ready for job opportunities using my Web Development skills!
